During my last year in college my grandfather had to move in with us because he was going blind through macular degeneration. Though he was an avid reader before he knew I was too and wanted to read along with me in what I was reading at the time. So we signed him up for audio books from the public library and every afternoon when I got back from school we would listen to some books on tape. We started off with the book I was reading at the time The Shadow Rising a book from the Wheel of Time. We did this for over a year and a half before he passed away. I will always have fond memories of my Grandfather listening to Michael Kraemer and Kate Reading.
